SENSITIZATION MEETINGS

We held small meetings with community leaders and guardians of children with disabilities like any other organized team. These gatherings served to deepen our engagement within their communities and provided valuable guidance on how to collaborate effectively. This approach not only enabled us to enroll more children in the organization but also helped us align our efforts with the set goals.

EDUCATION

Through our regular home visits, we've discovered a concerning trend, many parents are hesitant to enroll their children with disabilities in school, regardless of the nature of their condition. Recognizing the importance of education for all children, we embarked on a mission to change this mindset. We began encouraging parents and guardians of children with disabilities to consider sending them to nearby schools, emphasizing the value of education for their development and future opportunities.

Our efforts yielded positive responses from some parents who had previously believed that having a disability meant exclusion from educational settings. By fostering awareness and advocating for inclusive education, we aim to empower children with disabilities to access the same educational opportunities as their peers, fostering a more inclusive and equitable society.

Support to our children with scholastic materials.

Patience Ayebare (16 years), she was born normal, She is a double orphan staying with her grandmother in Nyabushabi village, Kyanamira subcounty. At 9 years while in school she started suffering from chest pain , got paralyzed and finally her legs couldn't move anymore. She dropped out of school up to date. We identified her in 2021 and since then we have been engaging her in different conversations and activities For example doing craft work however, her challenge has been buying materials for such work. Patience equally loves plaiting hair and with this coming out patient project, we are going to train her more in that field so that she can sustain herself financially after a full year of engagement.

Ayebare Kenneth 15 years can't talk well but can hear, walk and do little work at work when he wants. DSW took Kenneth at school early 2021 and we have been supportive to keep him there. Previously, his parents had kept him home because they can't afford school fees and scholastic materials but we kept encouraging and supporting them so that he can also acquire quality inclusive Education. That is good. DSW's regular contact with the family has born a fruit. The new school uniform was also financed by DSW

Nevertheless, the progress of such children being enrolled in schools is hindered by the limited availability of special schools, such as those for the Deaf, physically handicapped and other forms of disabilities, particularly in the Southwestern region, and their high tuition fees, which many parents cannot afford.

Home visits to our beneficiaries

In September 2021, we were fortunate to have a volunteer from SES Germany, Mr. Siegbert Garisch, who shared his expertise in disability-related matters. His three-weeks training program covered various programs and management criteria, significantly enhancing our organization's capabilities. We really appreciated this great opportunity that caused a positive impact in the works of our organization.

Mobility support

We were able to acquire a wheelchair for Junior to facilitate his mobility, addressing a significant challenge he faced. Often, Junior found himself isolated at home while others attended church or school or engaged in activities outside. His mother struggled to accompany him due to his size and inability to be carried on her back. Recognizing the impact of this situation, we coordinated efforts to provide a wheelchair, which we delivered to his home in Omwirashaniro, Bugarama. This act brought immense joy and relief to Junior and his family, as it granted him the freedom he rightfully deserved, allowing him to participate more fully in daily life despite his disability.

LOBBYING AND ADVOCACY

In 2021, DSW became aware of John's situation. Upon visiting his home in Rwakashande Rubira, it became evident that their living conditions were substandard. John resided with his mother in a two-bedroom house with a leaking roof, presenting a challenging environment. Despite their hardships, they lacked the means to improve their situation. John attended Rubira Primary School, where he faced difficulties acquiring essential school supplies. Following his enrollment in our organization, routine home visits were conducted, similar to other families under our care.

During one such visit, heavy rain exposed the severity of their living conditions. As we sought shelter, it became apparent that their dwelling was not just leaking, but their belongings were also being soaked. This revelation spurred a sense of urgency and concern, prompting us to explore solutions to provide them with a safer living environment.

While DSW's resources were limited, advocacy efforts and outreach to various networks, including the Lions Club Kabale, garnered support. Through collaborative efforts and generous contributions, enough funds were raised to construct a new home for John and his family. This significant achievement brought immense joy to the family and garnered appreciation from the wider community, highlighting the positive impact of collective action in addressing pressing social needs.
